Qualified Residential Treatment Program Eligibility Review

Comagine Health provides qualified residential treatment program, or QRTP, eligibility reviews for the Oregon Department of Human Services (ODHS), Child Welfare Division.

About QRTPs

QRTPs provide residential care and treatment to children. These children need specialized support and services because of:

- Effects of trauma
  or
- Mental, emotional or behavioral health challenges

What Does Comagine Health Do?

Comagine Health:

- Assesses children referred to us by ODHS.
- Recommends the level of care needed for each child.

We use a tool called the Child and Adolescent Needs and Strengths.

We also work closely with children and their families to:

- Learn more about them.
- Learn what they would like to happen.

Our purpose is to decide which program will:

- Provide the most suitable and effective level of care.
- Have the least restrictive setting.
- Be consistent with the short-term and long-term goals for the child.

By law, all children referred to a QRTP must have an independent assessment.
