Southern Nevada Pathways Community HUB

A collaborative approach to risk identification, streamlining referrals, reducing service duplication and enhancing care systems.

Background

- Comagine Health has collaborated with local partners to establish the Southern Nevada Pathways Community HUB (SNPCH) in Clark County, Nevada.
- This evidence-based model involves coordinating a network of care coordination agencies utilizing Community Health Workers (CHWs) to identify and address risk factors for at-risk community members.
- Within an evidence-based framework, the Pathways Community HUB creates a safety net for the most vulnerable community members.
- Community-based CHWs conduct outreach to identify individuals in need, maintaining ongoing relationships until clients complete their journey at the HUB, regardless of insurance coverage or health care provider.
- Each Pathway follows a nationally defined standard and stays open until the client's needs are met.

The Pathways Community HUB Institute Model®

The Pathways Community HUB Institute Model® (PCIM) facilitates community collaboration, enabling the formation of a care coordination network. Local CHWs, certified by the HUB, work closely with families, utilizing 21 standardized Pathways to identify and address risk factors, thereby removing barriers to achieving optimal health.

We use an outcomes-oriented framework for identifying and mitigating health-related social needs. Outcome criteria for each Pathway are defined within the PCHI Model, and Pathways remain open until a participant's need is met according to the outcome criteria.

HUB-certified CHWs utilize 21 standardized Pathways to identify and address risk factors for families, thereby removing barriers to achieving optimal health.

Why Pathways?

- The PCHI Model's training fulfills the criteria for CHW I certification by the Nevada Certification Board.
- Collaboration with SNPCH promotes a community-wide solution and minimizes the risk of individuals being lost during transitions between primary care providers or insurance.
- Our strategy implements a consistent approach to gather data on social determinants of health and resource deficiencies. This information can be leveraged by the community to collectively address broader community resource challenges.
